[illegible]

He [illegible] from [illegible] But [illegible] such a [illegible] seed [illegible]

For [illegible] 10 years [illegible] the [illegible] it in the following manner. We have, in the first place, washed the seed intended for sowing, changing it well in two or three changes of water. Having washed the grain, we have then soaked it about twelve hours, in what women, who make soap from ashes, call a weak lye. After turning off the lye, we have stirred in about two quarts of slacked lime to one bushel of wheat.

The object of washing the seed is to [illegible]; and we are confident that [illegible] we have seldom seen a field [illegible] in that way, since we adopted the above mode of preparing the seed. [illegible] soaking in lye [illegible] vegetation [illegible] would be committed to the ground in a dry time.—The advantage to be derived from the application of the lime, is extremely similar. It adheres to the seed, forming a rich and pungent envelope, defending it from insects and producing a vigorous blade; bringing it to maturity before the cold commences, which [illegible] frequently experience early in August.

We have invariably selected, for the cultivation of wheat, such ground as would be the most sure of producing a good crop of Indian corn. A dryish soil, admitting of an early application of the plough, we consider [illegible]; and we endeavour to sow it as early in the spring as we can stir the ground, and have it remain light.

We calculate to sow about five pecks of seed to an acre, and our crops have been from 12 to 22 bushels. I believe that 16 bushels per acre has been about an average yield.

The success attending our endeavour to cultivate this valuable species of grain, has induced many of our neighbours to try the experiment, which has resulted in a full conviction that, on our soil, we can raise more bushels of wheat per acre than of rye; that it is [illegible] liable to blast, and worth [illegible] more per bushel for the [illegible] of a family, without regarding the superiority of the flour in point of [illegible] and luxury.

For the last three years, I believe this town has produced [illegible] thousand bushels, and the [illegible] had at least four times as [illegible] of wheat as of rye, from the [illegible] number of acres, in the same [illegible].

I have now answered all the queries proposed in your communication above referred to. You will now permit me to suggest one or two remarks not inapplicable to the subject.

I consider wheat a valuable kind of grain to sow on ground intended for a crop of grass the succeeding year; more favourable to the future crop than rye or oats.

It is well known to every farmer, that our grass is frequently killed immediately after the crop of English grain is taken off the ground, by exposing the tender plant to a scorching sun, at a season of the year when the ground is most likely to be parched with drought,

[illegible]

The Paris [illegible] of November last contains the [illegible], under the head of [illegible] accident procured, in the [illegible] of Calvados, the knowledge of a new variety of wheat, whose cultivation has been considerably [illegible], and which now occupies [illegible] of those lands which have been employed in the raising of grain. This wheat is known by the name of [illegible] or English Corn, because it is originally from England. Its principal merits are, that it grows and produces abundant crops in light and sandy soils, where previously they could only sow rye; and because it is [illegible], ripe 15 days before any other variety of wheat. The rhind of the grain is very thin, and consequently it produces much meal and little bran. The bread which is made out of it is very white and very savoury. If the praise which is given to this new species of corn is well-founded, it will be a precious acquisition to agriculture and commerce.

The Major-General has again the satisfaction of announcing the approbation of the President of the United States to the conduct of the troops under his command, expressed in flattering terms through the Hon. the Secretary of War.

In parting with those brave men whose destinies have been so long united with his own, and in whose labors and glories it is his happiness and his boast to have participated, the Commanding General can neither suppress his feelings, nor give utterance to them as he ought. In what terms can he bestow suitable praise on merit so extraordinary, so unparalleled! Let him, in one burst of joy, gratitude and exultation, exclaim—"these are the saviours of their country;—these the patriot soldiers who triumphed over the invincibles of Wellington, and conquered the Conquerors of Europe! With what patience did you submit to privations—with what fortitude did you endure fatigue—what valor did you display in the day of battle! ... February, [illegible] that the Congress at Vienna [illegible]; that the Emperor of Russia [illegible] organizing a large army, being [illegible] on keeping Poland—these accounts were credited in the English circles. The revolutionists had so complete a possession of the interior, that the convoys could not travel between Mexico and Vera Cruz.

In corroboration of the above, a gentleman who arrived here last Thursday in the brig Enterprize, from St. Jago-de-Cuba, informs, that he saw it stated in London papers, (files of which, to the 10th of February, had been received at St. Jago, before he left there, 1st of April,) that the Vienna Congress had broken up abruptly [illegible] and very unexpectedly split upon the division of the Turkish Empire; in consequence of which a hot press of seamen had taken place in all the ports of England, and the recruiting service for the army was carrying on with vigor. We hesitate, notwithstanding, to lend it our entire belief.

Tax on Domestic Manufactures.—After a world of professions of their affection for our own manufactures, and after holding out every temptation for the people to vest their funds in them, no sooner have our rulers enticed them to engage to the amount of their capitals in such pursuit, than they send the collector with his tax list to enter their shops and dwelling-houses, examine their secret machinery, and demand a large proportion of their earnings to support a spend-thrift government. But it will be seen by the Circular that follows, that they have awakened the sleeping lion, and will soon be made to feel his fangs unless they hasten to [illegible] their steps. In this state

WM. C[illegible]

At an [illegible] meeting of the Manufacturers of the City of [illegible] subject to the United States laws, laying a duty on domestic Manufactures, held at Dooley's [illegible], on Tuesday evening, 18th April, 1815, JOHN SMITH was called to the Chair, and SAMUEL WHITE appointed Secretary.

The Committee, appointed at a previous meeting to take legal advice on the constitutionality of the laws laying a tax on Domestic manufactures, REPORTED, That they had taken legal advice thereon, and although their Counsel were not prepared to give a positive opinion against its constitutionality, yet they do not hesitate to say, that in many of its provisions, it is highly oppressive and inexpedient.

Upon motion, Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed, to draught resolutions, expressive of our sentiments of said laws, Whereupon, J. W. Forbes, G. Martine, and Wm. Cooley, were appointed a committee, who, having retired, draughted and reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:—

WHEREAS, it is the inherent right of the people peaceably to assemble to petition for redress of grievances and to express their approbation, or disapprobation, of public men and measures; and whereas certain Laws laying a tax on Domestic Manufactures, passed by Congress the 18th January, and 27th February, 1815, are in our opinion, grievous and unjust, inasmuch as said laws subject a part of the citizens to unreasonable and unwarrantable searches, and compelling them to declare the purpose for which such machinery is intended to be employed, thereby depriving the man of industry and genius of the fruits of his labour, by placing them on [illegible] on equal terms;— unjust, as the tax is laid but on a small part of the community and not on the citizens generally.

Therefore Resolved, unanimously, That we view the first section of the act laying a tax on Domestic Manufactures, as arbitrary and unjust, as it compels the man of industry, to pay one-half of his earnings to the support of government, and must eventually reduce him to beggary and want.

Resolved unanimously, That we consider the second section of said act, a violation of our birth-right, viz: Liberty and Independence; inasmuch as said section requires each Manufacturer, on or before the 13th of this month, and previous to manufacturing any article of his profession, to give a complete inventory and description of the tools, machinery or utensils he may use or intends to use; together with the purpose for which each tool, machine or utensil, is to be employed; and as it compels him to give the collector an account of all articles with their value that he has manufactured on hand; although said articles are not subject to duty or tax; and as it requires him to report to the collector any, and every alteration, each tool, machine, or utensil may undergo; and as it requires him to keep a book and to enter therein all articles manufactured by him; and a second in which he must note all the sales, and to whom sold, if such sales shall be above ten dollars; and as it authorises the collector to examine and inspect, and to take minutes therefrom each and every day, without assigning any cause therefor, although the said section requires, that each manufacturer shall take out a license and give bonds with at least two sureties that he will perform all that is required of him by this act; and as it authorises the collector to renew, or alter said bond in regard to sureties, or penalties thereof, thus placing the Liberty and Independence of each manufacturer, subject to the tax, in the hands of one man; who, if he is disposed, may deprive any, and all from pursuing their [illegible] is kept, and to examine, [illegible] or describe the same, and to inspect [illegible] accounts of the goods, wares, or [illegible] chandise, made or manufactured, [illegible] that every person refusing to [illegible] officer, or preventing him to [illegible] or describe the same, shall forfeit [illegible] pay the sum of five hundred dollars, although said officer shall [illegible] cause for so doing, or have any warrant therefor.

Resolved, unanimously, That we [illegible] ly disclaim being actuated by party [illegible] tives; and that the love of country [illegible] the freedom and prosperity of ourselves and posterity, are our sole motives [illegible] repelling this arbitrary and unjust la[illegible]

Resolved unanimously, That we have no confidence in the men who fram[illegible] passed or sanctioned said law, [illegible] while they were professing that they were the friends of Domestic Manufactures, were secretly applying the axe to its very roots, and, Judas-like, betrayed their masters.

Resolved unanimously, That [illegible] pledge our sacred honor, that we [illegible] not support, by our suffrages, any [illegible] who advocated, voted for, or [illegible] ed said laws.

Resolved unanimously, That a Committee of Correspondence be appointed who shall have power to correspond with the Manufacturers in the different sections of the Union, and that they draught a memorial to the President of the United States, praying a suspension of such parts of the act as are particularly grievous; and that they have power to call Meetings whenever in their opinion it shall be deemed necessary.

Resolved, That William Thompson, John Smith, William Cooley, Jos[illegible] [illegible], Benjamin Dibbs, and D[illegible] Low be said Committee.

SAMUEL WHITE, Sec'ry.

April 25.

Commodore Decatur, and his officers we understand, were honorably acquitted, by the court of inquiry, of all censure or implication on account of the loss of the President. The court was called in pursuance of the established usages in all navies, on the loss of a vessel under any circumstances. The opinion of the court, we presume, was unanimous; and its approbation and confirmation, we learn, was received from Washington by this morning's mail.

The United States schooner Nonsuch, Lieut. Haddaway, arrived here last evening, in 10 days from Bermuda. United States Corvette John Adams, Capt. Angus, had arrived at Bermuda, and sailed for home in co. with the Nonsuch.

By the above arrival, we learn, that all the American prisoners of war had left Bermuda before the arrival of the John Adams.

the Sine-Qua-Non, who had just [illegible] on board.

Both Capt. Pond and his brother were well known to passengers in the Sine-Qua-Non, who represented them as gentlemen of very respectable characters, and on whom strict reliance might be placed.

The schr. Sine-Qua-Non, Pond, master, in 26 days from Rochelle for New-York, arrived at Milford, (Con.) on Tuesday evening, and brings intelligence, that on the 28th of Feb. BONAPARTE landed at Frejus, in France, with 800 men, and erected his standard, to which many of the neighboring people flocked.—Marshal Macdonald was ordered to oppose him with 25,000 men, who, on seeing BONAPARTE in person, threw down their arms and refused to obey the orders of Macdonald, who then fled for Paris, and his men joined the standard of Bonaparte.

Bonaparte immediately commenced his march for Paris, and was joined on the road by many others, so that on the 20th of March he entered Paris without opposition, at the head of 80,000 men, having previously issued proclamations to the French people, and offered to Louis XVIII. liberty to depart for England.

The Congress at Vienna on hearing of the landing of Bonaparte, and the disaffection of Macdonald's men, broke up, and the Allied Sovereigns immediately departed for their own Kingdoms.

The above is indeed an Extraordinary Report. If Bonaparte is again master of France, miracles continue. The report itself certainly shows that he has made new and great efforts, and that commotions have recently or do exist in France. We have heretofore understood that many of the French troops were in favor of Napoleon; but those citizens not friendly to Louis XVIII, have not been considered partial to Bonaparte. The French Republicans were against both. It has been often asserted that Napoleon was always extremely unpopular in the south of France.

The Sine-Qua-Non touched at Milford, where Mr. Pond boarded her.—She then proceeded for New-York, where she is supposed to have arrived on Wednesday. It is reported she had a Proclamation of Bonaparte's on board. If he is gone to Paris again in power, no doubt he issued many Proclamations, on his way and there.

The distance from Frejus to Paris is 597 miles.

When Soult was appointed Minister of War, by Louis XVII Macdonald, succeeded him in the command of the [illegible] the Judges.—The General appeared in court, with a written defence; but this was objected to by the attorney of the United States. The Judge, after consideration, confirmed the objection of the district attorney, and refused to hear the defence read. The rule was made absolute and the General appeared this morning to receive sentence; which was a fine of one thousand dollars.—The populace, who are devoted to Jackson, on his leaving court, hurried him into a carriage, and conducted him to the back of the Coffee-House, where he harangued them in an able and suitable manner.—They then escorted him to his quarters.

At the mere suggestion of the measure a subscription was opened, limited to one dollar each person, for the purpose of paying the fine; before 3 o'clock the whole sum was raised in this small way; but if the limitation to one dollar each had not been adopted, it would have been raised in two minutes.—This business was so handsomely managed, that the General's check on the bank was not to be cashed up, but the money was placed to the Marshal's credit, without the General's knowing any thing of the transaction.

To-morrow he takes his parting dinner with us, and will set out immediately afterwards for Tennessee, accompanied with the prayers and benedictions of the whole population of this country.

Our accounts from Natchez are to the 24th ult. and we are concerned to learn that the troops returning from New-Orleans to their homes, were very sickly, and much mortality prevailed, notwithstanding the assiduous attention of their fellow-citizens. On the 22d the Steam-Boat Vesuvius arrived at Natchez, with 500 troops on board, 5 or 6 dying daily.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 22.

The Board of General Officers, for assisting the Secretary of War, in the reduction of the army, (selecting the officers to be retained, &c.) yesterday commenced their sittings at the War Office.

It consists of General Brown, Gens. Scott, Macomb and Ripley.

The current report, and belief is, that of the army, the following will be retained:

24 companies of artillery—the corps of lt. do. 1 rifle regt. and 8 infantry do—the corps of Engineers, and the Ordnance Department, to be retained, and the whole of the Staff, go out, excepting as many as may be indispensably necessary for continuing the public business.

[illegible] Lt. Com. [illegible] (510 tons) arrived in this harbour on Monday last, from Warren. She has been [illegible] and the [illegible] the first fair wind for New-York, to join the squadron destined for the Mediterranean.

The ship Isabella, Earl, from this port for New-Orleans, was spoken on the 25th inst. 2 days out.

Arrived at Boston, the very valuable prize brig Tagus, Edward Fanning, prize-master, captured 53 days since in the Bay of Biscay, by the privateer schooner Brutus, of Boston, cargo raw silk, fruit and madder-root. She is 170 tons by her English register, 2 years old, and coppered to the bends; was taken on a voyage from Smyrna to London. Her commander, Capt. Farmer, had been once before captured during the war. Her cargo was invoiced at Smyrna at upwards of $300,000, and is supposed to be worth here $400,000.

The [illegible] of this State [illegible] the [illegible] for the ensuing year.

We were [illegible] in stating the [illegible] majority in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] jority [illegible]

BY LAST EVENING'S MAIL.

[illegible], April 26.

IMPORTANT REPORT.

Mr. Henry [illegible] arrived in town on Wednesday night, in the New-York mail-stage, and has given the following important information. He has stated it, as nearly as possible, as related to him by Mr. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

THE following [illegible] beautiful lines [illegible] are said to be extracted from a New Poem by WALTER SCOTT, entitled "The Lord of the Isles" [illegible] contain a striking picture of [illegible] in our own times.

O WHO, that shar'd them, ever shall forget
The emotions of the SPIRIT-ROUSING time,
When breathless in the mart the Couriers met, [illegible]
[illegible] of prime;
[illegible] and the merry chime,
Hail'd news on news, as field on field was won,
When hope, long doubtful, soar'd at length sublime,
And our glad eyes, awake as day begun,
Watch'd Joy's broad banner rise, to meet the Rising Sun.
O! these were hours when thrilling joy repaid
A long, long course of darkness, doubts and fears!
The heart-sick faintness of the hope delay'd,
The waste, the woe, the bloodshed, and the tears,
That track'd with terror TWENTY ROLLING YEARS!
ALL WAS FORGOT in that BLYTHE JUBILEE!
Her downcast eye even pale affliction rears,
To sigh a thankful prayer amid the glee,
That hail'd the DESPOT'S FALL, and PEACE and LIBERTY!
Such news o'er SCOTLAND'S Hills triumphant rode,
When 'gainst the Invaders turned the battle's scale,
When Bruce's banner had victorious flow'd
O'er Loudon's mountain, and in Ury's vale.

FOR THE MERCURY.

LINES

Occasioned by the Departure of Two beloved Connexions.

WHAT can arrest the falling tear,
When to our friends we bid adieu?
When we their voice no longer hear,
Their forms belov'd no longer view.
When to the dangers of the main,
The fickle wave, the roaring wind,
To fight they go, and once again
With aching heart leave us behind.
We still must trust in that dread Power,
To which in grief we always flee;
In days of joy, or sorrow's hour,
His ear can hear, His eye can see:
In GOD on high, whose nod can save,
Can still the wind, protect the brave.
